

REFLECTION SHEET

Date of Session: 18th September 2017

Observer/Tutor: Beverley Woolford

Strengths of session:

A workshop idea was given and developed in the class on how to embed 'Exemplifying British Values' (EBV) into a lesson. It was suggested that it does not have to specifically be integrated within our core specialism, which seems to be a misconception. However, a simple starter 'toolbox' session could be carried out, where we could present to the students highlights of world news, which could open up discussions.

What stood out today from the session?

Knowledge, that through only a few sessions, we could potentially complete two tasks from UET6.

How would you implement what you have learnt today into your own practice?

Looking at different memory acquisition techniques, was covered. So perhaps repeating myself in class, yet this not work when I say 'No Mobiles' for the 100th time!

What was the hardest part of today's session?

Trying to formulate ways of embedding EBV into the lessons without it being forced and there for the sake of being there.

How could I improve on my work in today's session?
