

REFLECTION SHEET

Date of Session: 09nd October 2017

Observer/Tutor: Beverley Woolford

Strengths of session:

There were some very positive elements within this session; overall, I feel that I am starting to see the bigger picture and how the tasks from UET6 are just falling into place. The core of this session, was in providing feedback on the teaching and learning given through the micro teach lessons. The act of providing feedback is very reflective in, getting us, the learners to critically evaluate our own practice, where we can start to see the developmental benefits.

Areas of development:

I will look at developing my assessment of learning, which moves beyond the observational, where a more evidenced check is carried out that the learner acknowledges and understands.

What stood out today from the session?

The diverse and interesting skill base of the learners, which was evident in the micro teaching sessions. Austin's Butterfly, was an interesting video.

How would you implement what you have learnt today into your own practice?

I will examine how I can implement micro critiquing into my practice to benefit the learner's development.

What was the hardest part of today's session?

Trying to keep track of what task/activity relates to what unit. I'm linear, so one unit at a time is logical, having completed a task and it relates to multiple units can discombobulate me.

How could I improve on my work in today's session?
