

REFLECTION SHEET

Date of Session: 16th October 2017

Observer/Tutor: Beverley Woolford (MICRO)

Strengths of session:

Overall, I believe that my micro teach lesson was very successful: I engaged all learners, ensured that learning was taking place through recap's and questions and kept them entertained. The main strengths were my resources, engagement with the learners, voice projection and classroom presence. The demonstrational aspect was a good positive as it took a little focus of me and got the learners working. The micro workout, homework challenge, appeared to be received well. Something to possibly check!

Areas of development:

My main area to develop is my timing; this was a dedicated micro teach lesson of fifteen minutes, where I believe I overran by about seven minutes. My language was commented upon, in terms of some of it being too high; as my style leans towards a 'wing-it' approach, I had not script, so my language is dependent on what just rolls of my tongue at the time.

What stood out today from the session?

The range of resources being developed and the checks of learning throughout the micro teach lessons. The diversity of the group is still evident.

How would you implement what you have learnt today into your own practice?

A Q&A paper that was presented for one of the lessons, was very good; simple and effective.

What was the hardest part of today's session?

Still trying to remember everyone's name; it is still an area to work upon.

How could I improve on my work in today's session?

As timing was my main area to develop, I need to ensure that I conduct some test practice lessons. Maybe just a bullet-point breakdown of the times.
